Leader Relativity

Finally a Starting Point for New Leaders

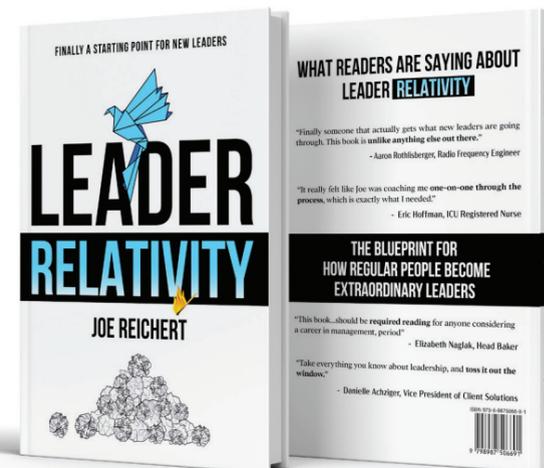

Leader Relativity was written with just one goal in mind - helping people like you take their first steps into leadership. To guide you through the all too common moments of 'oh crap, wtf am I doing?' that start to creep in for everyone at the beginning. Leader Relativity is without question the most simplified version of leadership to ever be put on paper, and through real world examples, it outlines in detail how regular people become extraordinary leaders.

LEADER

RELATIVITY

JOE REICHERT

Michael Jai Grant

Eve is a frustrated sixteen-year-old who uncovers a dark family secret. Muriel is trapped in managed care by the son who stole her fortune. Taking advantage of a twisted moment, this unlikely pair embark on a murky mission to rectify their wrongs. Together they confront Muriel's wavering cognition, Eve's emotional wounds, and sometimes each other. They're on the road to salvation—unless their families catch them first!

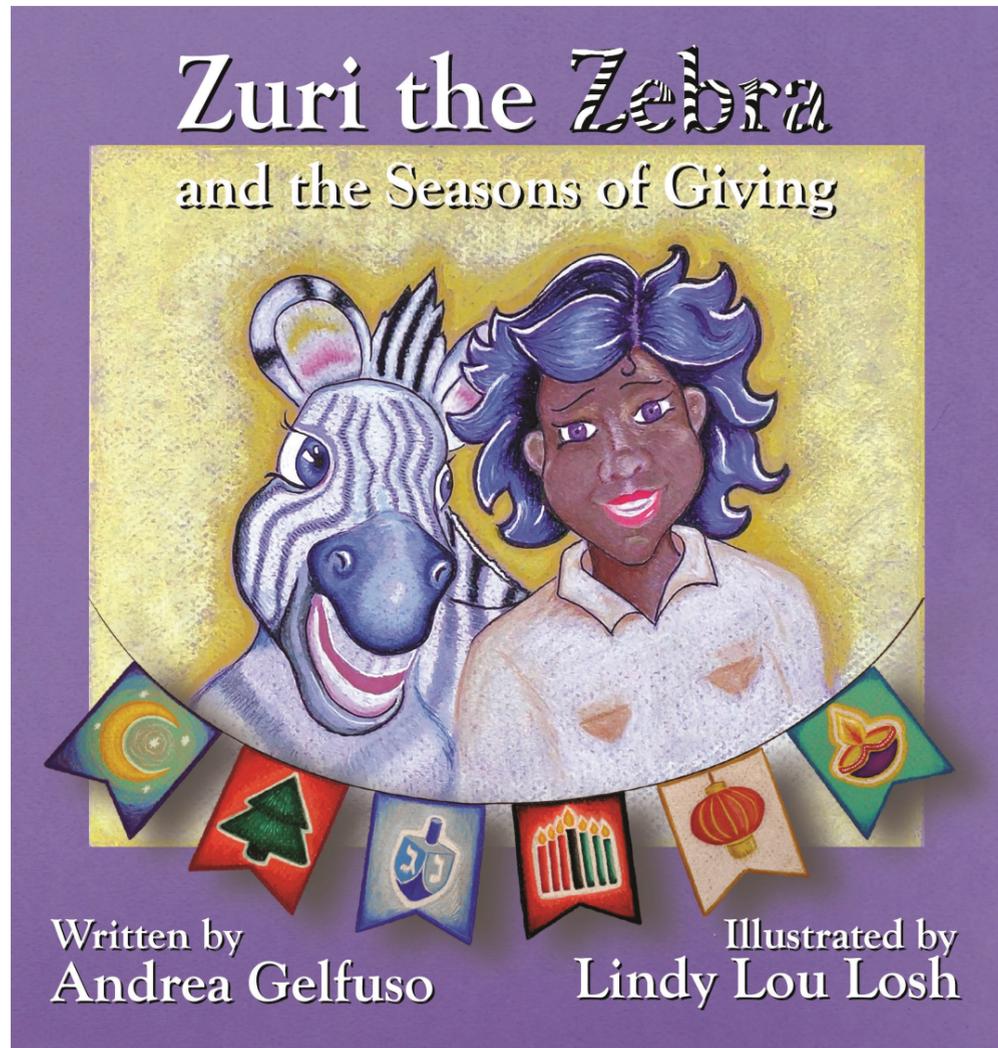

Michael Jai Grant's new novel explores people's inclination to do the wrong things for the right reasons. He writes a provocative and spirited journey that challenges our notions of dementia and elder care, sexuality, the difference between religion and spirituality, and the complex world of Teenagedom. At its core, it delves into themes of friendship, family, liberation, and the circuitous routes we all take to finding our way home.

Zuri the Zebra and the Seasons of Giving

Written by:
Andrea Gelfuso

Illustrated by:
Lindy Lou Losh

Zuri the zebra spends her days walking back and forth in her zoo enclosure with nothing to do. When Sam the zookeeper forgets some cans of paint, Zuri's neighbors, a pair of rascally chimpanzees, agree to help her brighten things up. The colorful zebra begins to attract a lot of attention, but everyone is more focused on the holiday season's gift-giving to worry about the plight of the animals at the zoo. Can Zuri and her friends help change the seasons of giving after all?

ACT, ONE

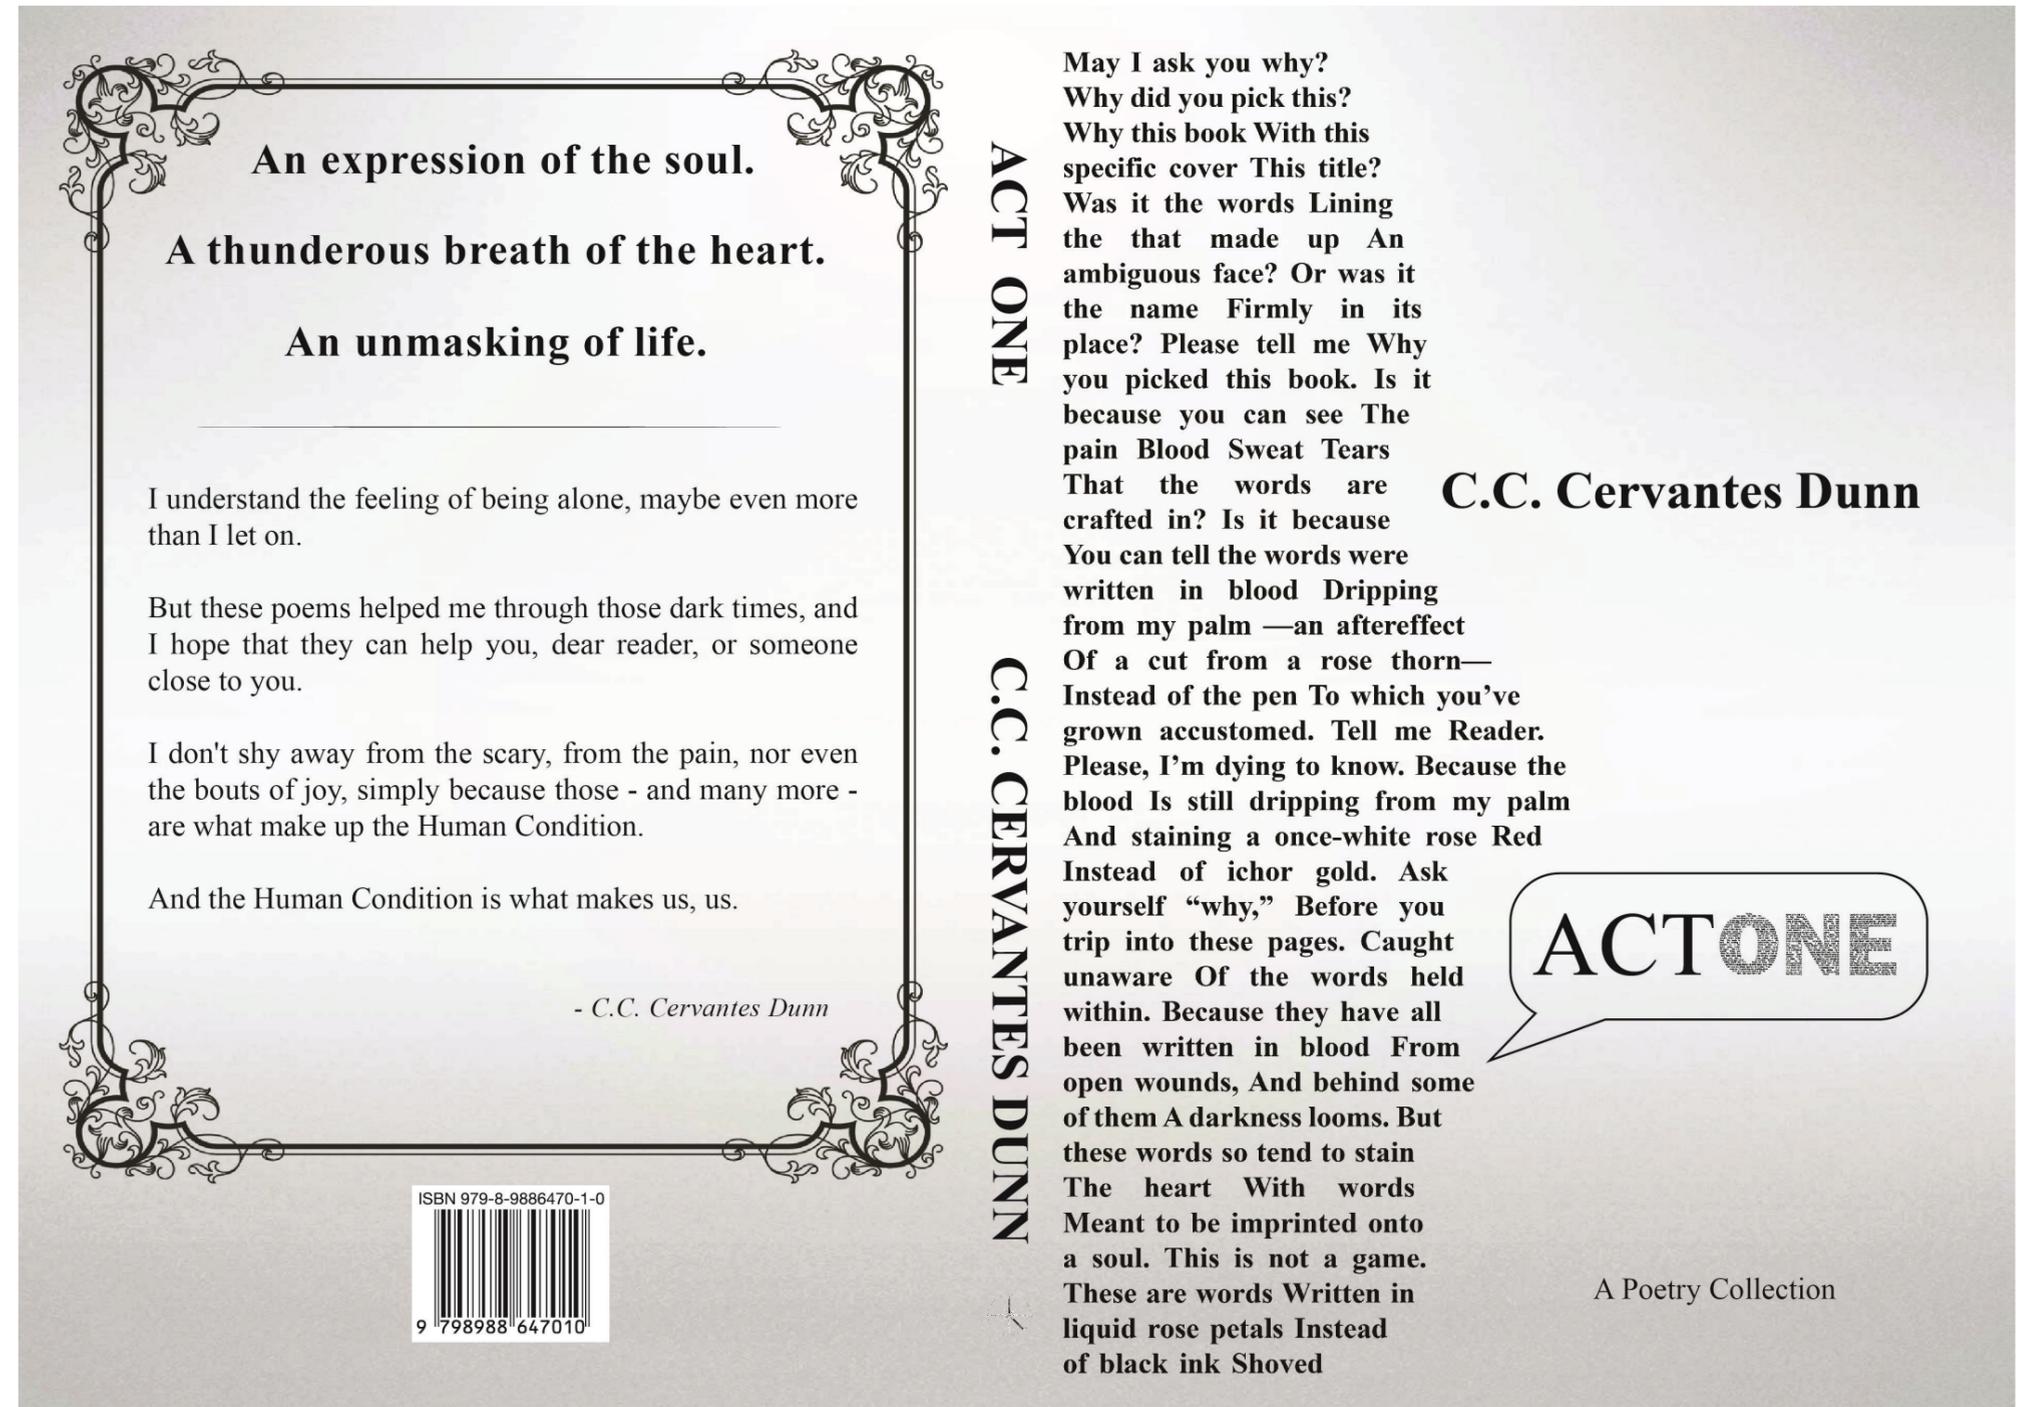

A Poetry Collection

I understand the feeling of being alone, maybe even more than I let on. But these poems helped me through those dark times, and I hope that they can help you, dear reader, or someone close to you. I don't shy away from the scary, from the pain, nor even the bouts of joy, simply because those - and many more - are what make up the Human Condition. And the Human Condition is what makes us, us.

Chris Carmen Cervantes Dunn is a Colorado author who is finishing out their high school career. Though this is their first book, they hope it is impactful to all who read it. They enjoy spending time with a good book, a cup of coffee, and one of their cats; but they are often found with their sisters, or their close friends. They work with the local nonprofit, Denver Writes, and participates in their school's Speech and Debate Team.

May I ask you why?
 Why did you pick this?
 Why this book With this specific cover This title?
 Was it the words Lining the that made up An ambiguous face? Or was it the name Firmly in its place? Please tell me Why you picked this book. Is it because you can see The pain Blood Sweat Tears
 That the words are crafted in? Is it because You can tell the words were written in blood Dripping from my palm —an aftereffect
 Of a cut from a rose thorn—
 Instead of the pen To which you've grown accustomed. Tell me Reader.
 Please, I'm dying to know. Because the blood Is still dripping from my palm
 And staining a once-white rose Red Instead of ichor gold. Ask yourself "why," Before you trip into these pages. Caught unaware Of the words held within. Because they have all been written in blood From open wounds, And behind some of them A darkness looms. But these words so tend to stain
 The heart With words Meant to be imprinted onto a soul. This is not a game.
 These are words Written in liquid rose petals Instead of black ink Shoved

Oh God of Second Chances, Here I am Again

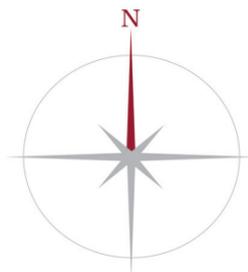

Life Happens. We make mistakes and maybe we know that we are not showing up as our best selves. Sometimes the universe hits us with a cosmic two-by-four as a wake-up call to what we are (or are not) doing. The question is not whether you will be knocked down by life. That is inevitable. The question is how do you get back up again?

Oh God of Second Chances, Here I Am Again is a book about what it takes to get back up again and again.

Bedtime Stories for Grown Ups, Vol 1.

A whimsy of colorful family members keeping each other from near disaster and headed for love, a fast-paced distraction of a mountain town kidnapping and attempted rescue, a driven retired Naval officer 'making things right' wherever she sees the need for practical mercy and justice, a mysterious and understated antiquarian bookstore owner with the key to a customer's secret heritage. And more.

This collection of stories is an escape from the stresses of life, while also reminding us of those lessons we learned as children from the fables of old.

My Modena

A Year of Fear, Laughter, and Exhilaration in Italy

More than just a funny story, we all want something real, and really funny. Something that brings us along for the ride and gives us the belly laugh we've all but forgotten was even possible in our lives.

What if the answer to those all-but-forgotten belly laughs came from a Coloradan's adventure of moving her entire family of four to Italy for one year? What could possibly go wrong?

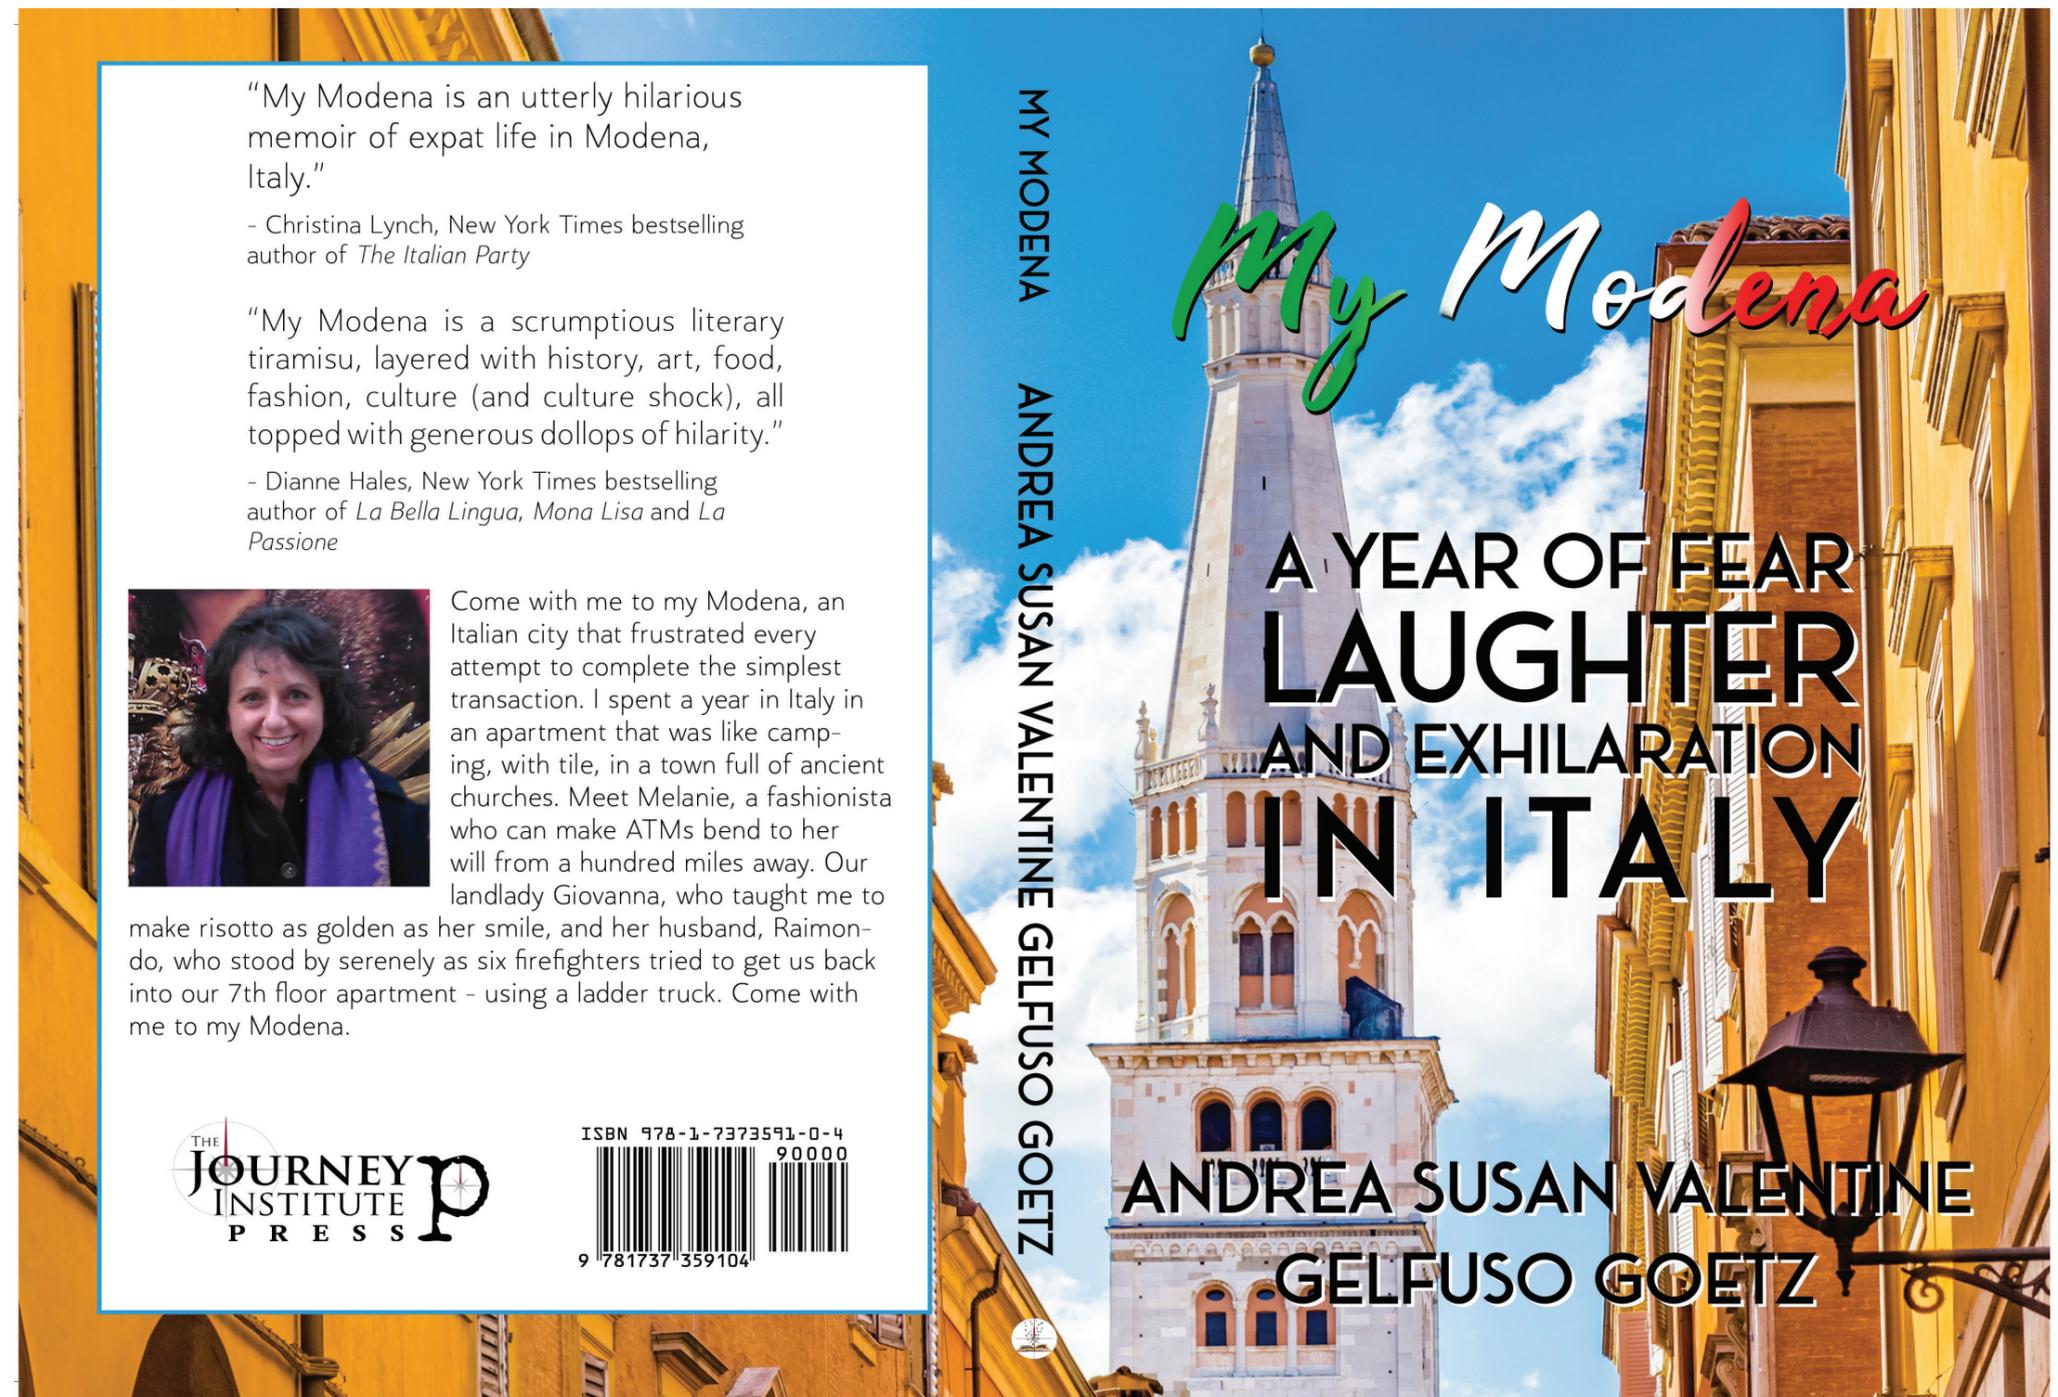

Everything!

Joining her on this comical journey will transport the reader, if only for a while, to a place and time away from the troubles and strife of the day.

Sometimes we all just need a break. My Modena offers that break in a hilarious true story of one woman's attempt to do the simplest of things in a foreign country with hilarious results.

Andrea Susan Valentine Gelfuso Goetz

"My Modena is an utterly hilarious memoir of expat life in Modena, Italy."

- Christina Lynch, New York Times bestselling author of The Italian Party

"My Modena is a scrumptious literary tiramisu, layered with history, art, food, fashion, culture (and culture shock), all topped with generous dollops of hilarity."

- Dianne Hales, New York Times bestselling author of La Bella Lingua, Mona Lisa and La Passione

Come with me to my Modena, an Italian city that frustrated every attempt to complete the simplest transaction. I spent a year in Italy in an apartment that was like camping, with tile, in a town full of ancient churches. Meet Melanie, a fashionista who can make ATMs bend to her will from a hundred miles away. Our landlady Giovanna, who taught me to make risotto as golden as her smile, and her husband, Raimondo, who stood by serenely as six firefighters tried to get us back into our 7th floor apartment - using a ladder truck. Come with me to my Modena.
